

ABSTRACT

A system and method is provided for creating a digital circuit, such as a configured FPGA or a VLSI chip. User code includes algorithm specifications having precisely defined operators and variables, data representation specifications and data communication specifications. The user code is compiled to create a digital circuit. For example, the compiled user code is used to generate either a hard-wired digital circuit or the configuration instructions for configuring a re-configurable digital circuit.

1008130-1